Right to Freedom (Articles 19 to 22)

Source: Constitution of India (public document, legislative.gov.in / India Code)

This document gives a short overview of Right to Freedom (Articles 19 to 22).

Article 19(1) guarantees six freedoms to citizens, including freedom of speech and expression, assembly, association, movement, residence and profession. Article 19(2) allows reasonable restrictions on free speech in the interests of sovereignty, security of the State, public order, decency, morality and similar grounds. Article 20 protects a person against ex post facto laws, double jeopardy and compulsion to be a witness against oneself.

Article 21 protects life and personal liberty, and it cannot be taken away except by procedure established by law. Article 21A, added by the 86th Amendment in 2002, makes education a Fundamental Right for children aged 6 to 14 years. Article 22 protects persons against arbitrary arrest and detention, including the right to be told the grounds of arrest.

Under Article 22 an arrested person must be produced before a magistrate within 24 hours, excluding travel time. An arrested person also has the right to consult and be defended by a lawyer of his or her choice.

Note: This is a simplified educational summary written in our own words from public information. It is not legal, financial or medical advice. Verify details with the official source before relying on them.